Is tris divergent

"It ends when one of you is unable to continue," says Eric. "According to Dauntless rules," Four says, "one of you could also concede." Eric narrows his eyes at Four. "According to the old rules," he says. "In the new rules, no one concedes." "A brave man acknowledges the strength of others," Four replies. "A brave man never surrenders," Eric says, and Four and Eric stare at each other for a few seconds. I feel like I am looking at two different kinds of Dauntless—the honorable kind, and the ruthless kind. But even I know that in this room, it's Eric, the youngest leader of the Dauntless, who has the authority. Trending Popular Contact us Asked by: Miracle Shields Score: 4.7/5 (21 votes) Tris's result indicates that she doesn't fit neatly into any of the five factions, meaning that she is "divergent". She has equal aptitude for Erudite, Dauntless and Abnegation, the latter being her family's faction, and has to decide which of the three to join. What percent Divergent is Tris? First man shows 10% and the little girl shows 40% eventhough the instrument still confirms them as divergents and they are resistance to simulations. Only Tris shows 100%.Is Tris's mom Divergent? In Allegiant, Tris discovers that her mother is actually Pure (Divergent, which means that they are normal people like us, without genes that were modified) and comes from Milwaukee and not from Chicago (where Tris lived most of her life). What is Tris personality in Divergent? Tris has been shown to be selfless and quite intelligent at times that solidifies her status as Divergent. She is often scolded in Dauntless for being too selfless, and is teased mercilessly for being a Stiff, which is being from Abnegation. Do Tobias and Christina get together? To the surprise of many fans, Four and Christina fall in love. Roth ends the story with a hopeful future for the two of them with Four professing "we work, and dream. We fight, and we laugh, and we fall in love. 29 related questions found This is generally understood as a suicide mission, and, although Tris manages to escape the death serum, she is shot by David, the head of the Bureau, just as her mission is accomplished. As she dies, Tris sees a vision of her mother reaching out to her. Beatrice Prior, the narrator and protagonist of Divergent, is a smart and stubborn sixteen-year-old girl. Initially, she lives with her mother, father, and brother in Abnegation, the faction focused on selflessness and humility, but it's clear as the novel opens that she isn't at home there. As Tris notes, tattoos "are a part of life here" with the Dauntless—and here is where she lives (19.29). ... Unlike the "these birds represent my family" tattoo, the Abnegation seal symbolizes who Tris is and will always be on some level. She may be Dauntless, but she's also got some Abnegation in her. The following night, Tris wakes Christina up and tells her that she's going to Abnegation to see her brother, but she actually goes to Erudite to turn herself in as a Divergent. Andrew Prior was the father of Tris Prior and Caleb Prior, and the husband of Natalie Prior. He was a member of the city Council, a group of Abnegation tasked in governing the city. He often showed his extreme and nearly conceited disdain for Erudite. Andrew was killed by a bullet wound at the end of Divergent. Tris tells Tobias she's not sure she can stay with him anymore. ... Tris eventually reconciles with Tobias, finally feeling comfortable and the two make love for the first time. The two stay together to fight against the Bureau. Love InterestTobias Eaton- also known as 'Four', Tris develops strong feelings for him. In the epilogue, he helps Evelyn, his mother, transition to life outside the city, and he's finally able to mourn the loss of Tris by scattering her ashes over the city. Tris's fears include being devoured by crows, drowning in a tank, being kidnapped in her Abnegation bedroom, killing her family, the ocean and rocks, and being burned at the stake. Tris was able to get past all her fears in record breaking time, which Four was impressed by. Her most distinguished trait is bravery. Tris is extremely brave, from being the first jumper to ranking first in the initiation. Tris' bravery outranks even some of the Dauntless members as observed through her actions. Tris originally had 7 fears, but later had 6 which included: To be devoured by crows - symbolic of her family turning on her/powerlessness. Drowning in a tank of water - symbolic of weakness and inability to escape. Men reaching for her in her Abnegation room - symbolic, scared of death. The Abnegation The main goal of Abnegation people is to forget oneself and serve others, so they wear gray clothing to be less noticeable as they prefer simplistic functionality over frivolous style. Thus, her first tattoo represents her family, symbolizing her continued allegiance to her old life in Abnegation; her second tattoo is Dauntless, symbolizing her love for her new community, etc. Christina reveals that she hates Peter, Drew, and Molly, a trio of inseparable Candor initiates she's known since childhood, and calls Peter "pure evil." As Al and Will hesitate to begin their fight, Four says they are allowed to concede, while Eric insists that each pair must battle until someone is unable to continue ... Tris is 16 and it says it over and over. Tobias is 18. It's just fact. Ages seems to be very important in these books, so I don't understand why they would mess with those. This doesn't happen as Tris never escaped the Erudite headquarters. Tris has an injury in her shoulder because she was shot in the previous book. ... Tris and Four don't have sex until Allegiant. Tris and Four have sex. Tris and Tobias split up and get all gushy about how much they love each other. ... She decides to sacrifice herself instead of Caleb, because he's doing it to absolve himself of guilt (wrong reason) and she's killing herself in the name of love (right reason). Caleb Prior is the nineteen-year-old brother of Beatrice "Tris" Prior and the son of Andrew and Natalie Prior. Her last words to Tris are "Be brave, Beatrice. I love you." With these words, she's advocating both Dauntless behavior and Abnegation values. The statement is bittersweet, since she is shot to death by Dauntless soldiers immediately afterward. Tris is indeed an unusually strong Divergent. She is not, however, the "ultimate Divergent," in the sense of having aptitude for all five factions. A Divergent shows aptitude for two or more factions. "Yes and no. My conclusion," she explains, "is that you display equal aptitude for Abnegation, Dauntless, and Erudite. People who get this kind of result are..." She looks over her shoulder like she expects someone to appear behind her. "...are called...Divergent." We know she is not Amity. "If you had shown an automatic distaste for the knife and selected the cheese, the simulation would have led you to a different scenario that confirmed your aptitude for Amity. That didn't happen, which is why Amity is out." Nor is she Candor: "The choices you made didn't even allow Candor, the next possibility, to be ruled out, so I had to alter the simulation to put you on the bus. And there your insistence upon dishonesty ruled out Candor." Tris showed aptitude for only three factions: Abnegation, Dauntless, and Erudite. As such, she has a greater degree of Divergence than most other Divergent, but not the maximum possible degree (i.e. equal aptitude for all five factions). Divergence generally means greater mental flexibility, though (it's what makes Divergents hard to control), so even a Candor-aligned Divergent could probably lie if necessary. Say a Divergent is aligned with Candor and Abnegation, and being honest would mean someone dying. A pure Candor would always tell the truth anyway. But in an Abnegation-Candor Divergent, saving the other person's life might win out. It's worth noting that, despite possessing "only" three aptitudes, Tris still has a high degree of Divergence (I don't believe that anyone with more was mentioned). As we see in the last book, she also possesses an extraordinary degree of resistance to simulations and serums, which might justify calling her "the ultimate Divergent" in another sense. Films Initially, the films seemed to take a similar position to the books: namely, that Tris had aptitude for three factions. From Divergent: TRIS: No, but what was my result? TORI: Abnegation. And Erudite. And Dauntless. Dauntless... Your results were inconclusive. TRIS: That's impossible. It doesn't make any sense. TORI: No. Not impossible. It's just extremely rare. They call it "Divergent." However, it would seem that at some point, Tris having aptitude for three factions out of five was considered insufficiently heroic. As such, in the films she is the "ultimate divergent," having aptitude for all the factions. In order to open a box in Insurgent, Tris must also pass the Candor simulation: TRIS: Mom, I don't want to be Divergent anymore. I just want to feel safe again. VO: Candor sim complete. As well as the Amity simulation: SIMULATION TRIS: No one's gonna love you Tris. They're not even gonna miss you. This world will only be better off without you. One less Divergent ruining things. And no one will ever forgive you for what you've done. TRIS: You're wrong. Because I will. VO: Amity sim complete. The basic explanation for why she could lie, though, remains the same. Why could she lie despite her capacity for Candor? Why was she able to fight and kill people if she had aptitude for Amity? Being Divergent means being not being bound by the mental restrictions of factions. While in the books, Tris's performance in her initial simulation would have indicated that she was not suited for Candor, in the movies it's more clear that Divergence represents the capability to act like one of the factions, not the obligation to do so. In other words, Tris has both Amity and Dauntless in her, but can act in an Amity or Dauntless manner, depending on the circumstances. Think of Tris's brain as a computer that can boot multiple operating systems. As mentioned earlier, if Tris is faced with a choice between lying and saving someone's life, her Dauntless and Abnegation tendencies might overrule her Candor tendencies, and thus push her to conceal the truth. In the films, the point of being Divergent is greater mental flexibility. Leaning toward Candor might mean that she has some tendency to be truthful, but could break that mold if necessary—say, if her other factional tendencies are stronger in a given situation.
